Hongkong, July 1st, 1886.

THE imposition of a poll tax on Chinese immigrants into the Northern Territory does not appear to have proved so satisfactory to the colonists there as in other provinces and districts of Australia. The poll tax of £10 per head was imposed on the 11th May, and little more than a month of its working sufficed to convince the South Australian Government of its un wisdom. A telegram in Sydney contemporaneously stated "Fulmination" in the 18th June, that the effect of the poll tax on the Chinese was already apparent, probably they were quietly leaving the country, and the industries that were dependent upon their labour and enterprise were threatened with extinction. The fishing and dredging operations in the Northern Territories carried on exclusively by Chinese, and planting will be impossible without their assistance. The enterprising Chinese agriculturist has recently taken to rice planting on the Murray river. It is stated that he sowed 30 pounds of rice grain, and reaped one ton, worth £1 per cwt., more than imported rice. The land on this river is described as superior to the best rice land in Asia, and a sample of the grain has been sent to the Colonial Exhibition. It is also asserted that maize does remarkably well in the Territory, yielding two crops, each sowing forty bushels to the acre. It will readily understand that the exodus of the Chinese from this part of Australia situated as it is beneath the burning sun of the tropics, and destitute of any other reliable labour supply, would greatly retard its development and probably involve it in immediate disaster. That these reasons, and not any more sentiment of generosity, have influenced the South Australian Government in repealing the poll tax on the Chinese is a fact that on the 1st July, the South Australian Parliament, after a long debate, decided to do.

The constables said thence came to them for assistance, and they went to the Star Hotel, from whence they were ejected by the defendant. P.C.s. Phelps and Ford stated that they looked into the hotel that evening, and found a Chinese constable named Lam A. I., and another Chinese constable named Lam A. II., and another Chinese constable named Lam A. III., and another Chinese constable named Lam A. IV., and another Chinese constable named Lam A. V., and another Chinese constable named Lam A. E. ENGLISH AND CHINESE DICTIONARY
WITH THE PRACTICAL MANDARIN
PRONUNCIATION.

An Anglo-Chinese Dictionary published at the Daily Press Office, Hongkong.

For comprehensive and practical services this Work stands unrivaled. All the now words which the Chinese have of late years been compelled to coin to express the numerous objects of their daily life, their religion, their government, and in science generally, which from the stand-point of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are here given in extenso. Each and every word is fully illustrated and explained, forming exercises for students of the most instructive nature. Both the Court and Punti pronunciations are given, the accents being carefully marked on the best principle hitherto attained. The typography of the characters is based upon the size of body, thereby effecting a vast economy of space, achieving a clearness not previously attained, and dispensing with those vast margins and vacant spaces which have heretofore characterized Chinese publications.

To illustrate the vast scope of the work following facts are submitted for consideration—Challenger's Vocabulary contains about 16,000 Chinese characters, and Mather's Chinese and English Dictionary about 100,000 entries; this work contains more than 600,000 English words, and upwards of 600,000 Chinese characters.

Arcan, despite all the grammars and other elementary works as yet published, the student of this difficult language absolutely requires examples to display the various applications and equivalents of different words which have one general meaning. Of these examples this work contains more than five times as many as any other. Dictionary hitherto published.

For practical purposes the arrangement of the work is so complete, that a reference to its pages assures a person who understands English to communicate effectively with natives who understand nothing but Chinese. In this respect the work will be found indispensable to all English-speaking Chinese, and to those who themselves it explains subjects fully with which very few indeed of them are perfectly acquainted. To parties resident in England and interested in China it cannot but be invaluable occasionally.

It comprises upwards of two thousand large quarto pages.

A large REDUCTION in PRICE is made to Purchasers of SIX copies.
